THE RABBI SPEAKS

RABBI BARRY BLOCK

Dear Friends,
Shortly before I became your rabbi, I attended a workshop for clergy of all faiths taught by Dan Hotchkiss, author of Governance and Ministry: Rethinking Board Leadership.

Hotchkiss's central insight is that some people are happy volunteering to perform the service of religious institutions, while others are interested in being decision makers, but few people are eager to do both.

Hotchkiss offers the example of a man who built scores of houses with Habitat for Humanity. Soon, he was asked to be on Habitat's local board, and he dutifully accepted. Quickly, the eager volunteer to become an unhappy Board member. He had no interest in poring over financials or making institutional decisions. Instead, he wanted to hang sheetrock and nail shingles on roofs alongside the folks who would soon occupy the homes they built together.

At Congregation B'nai Israel, we are blessed with many volunteers who are actively engaged in the work of the congregation—in the kitchen or the office, on the bimah or in the Religious School, at Oakland Jewish Cemetery, with our youth, and more. We are equally blessed with thoughtful, discerning Board members, who examine financials and enact congregational policy.

Many both volunteer and engage in governance, in keeping with long B'nai Israel tradition. Unlike the man in Hotchkiss's example, some who enjoy cooking a Shabbat dinner or leading music, for example, also happily engage in decision-making necessary to the business of the congregation. This year, leaders who had “signed up” for governance roles found themselves devoting untold hours of volunteer service. Let me describe but two of many.

Shelly Baron, our Administrative Vice President, envisioned and implemented an entirely new staff structure for our congregation. Sometimes, she worked in areas of her expertise, and other times less so. To quote Shelly, “We have a whole H.R. department where I work, and I’m not in that department!” She never let that stop her, even as she accessed expert assistance as needed.

At the same time, Darcy Krupitsky has found herself needing to be much more than the Treasurer, which is a time-consuming job under the best of circumstances. For several months, she was directly supervising our bookkeeper and overseeing the financial functions performed by our administrative assistant, both of which had been staff roles previously. Then, with the tragic death of Cheryl Brown, C.P.A., our bookkeeper, Darcy took on an even more active role in the day-to-day financial management of the congregation.

Volunteer service should never be thankless, as it is often described. We work hard if imperfectly to thank our volunteers. It’s less clear, though, how and when we ought to thank officers of the congregation for their work, even when it’s above and beyond the call of duty. Their work far from over, the season of our Annual Congregational Meeting is an appropriate time to thank Darcy and Shelly for their extraordinary service to Congregation B’nai Israel.

Rabbi Nikki DeBlosi, PhD (she/her) connects folks to the breadth & depth of Jewish tradition through inclusive, innovative, & insightful Jewish teaching, speaking, & ritual.

She holds a B.A. in Women's and Gender Studies from Harvard University, an MA and PhD in Performance Studies from New York University, and rabbinic ordination from Hebrew Union College-Jewish Institute of Religion. She lives with her wife and children in Montclair, New Jersey.

From Lewis Krain, President

If you've ever attended a LifeQuest session, you know that you will see an impressive turnout from the Jewish community. I had the pleasure of teaching a class about mental health during the LifeQuest spring session, and every time I walked in the building I was amazed by how many faces from our Congregation were there, both attending and teaching classes. Rabbi Block himself taught a class this semester.

If you're not familiar with LifeQuest of Arkansas, you should really check it out. It's a not-for-profit interfaith organization dedicated to adult learning and continuing education for older individuals. Classes are organized in a mini-college model of 8 weekly sessions, and can cover any subject matter. Topics often range from art to technological skills to history to science. There were 56 classes offered this past semester, all taught by community volunteers. LifeQuest is currently supported by almost 20 faith-based organizations of widely varying religions (as well as a growing list of corporate sponsors), but Congregation B'nai Israel is one of the 11 founding organizations. Our support runs so deep, in fact, that while on the Budget Committee recently it was made clear to me (sometimes forcefully) by multiple congregants that the LifeQuest line item was not to be touched.

One of the things I love about Judaism is that education is a Jewish value. Being able to personally read, consider, and discuss the lessons of Torah is central to our way of life. Our emphasis on education is one of the things that has made us resilient as a people, and enabled us to keep our identity in Diaspora. This value is reflected in our support of LifeQuest and the impressive attendance I see there.

I'm proud of our congregation's sustained support for LifeQuest. I'm proud that we have always made it a priority to support education, even when our own budget has been tight. If you're unfamiliar with LifeQuest, give it a chance; whether you register for a class or volunteer to teach one yourself, it's a rewarding way to get engaged with the broader community and learn something along the way.

Memories of Religious School from May

Our last day of Religious School before the summer break was especially memorable, with our students joining together with our community for a celebration of Yom HaZikaron (Israeli Memorial Day) and Yom Ha'atzmaut (Israeli Independence Day). A solemn ceremony took place in the Congregation B'nai Israel sanctuary, with former IDF members talking about their experiences and the history of conflict that has been too often the prevailing story in the Jewish State.

Afterward, a fun time was had in the Social Hall and Tenenbaum Center, as volunteers from the Jewish Federation of Arkansas made sure we had plenty of good things to eat and games to play. Just as in Israel, the seriousness of remembering those who have given their lives in defense of the state gave way to a joyous celebration of independence, all in honor of the 77th birthday of Israel.

As I reflect on my first few months being involved with our Religious School, I can't help but be humbled by the strength and dedication of our teachers, volunteers, and madrichim. Singing songs and sitting in on lessons has given me such a sense of purpose, and Sundays are easily my favorite day to come to work. I look forward to many more years of seeing our students grow in knowledge, and I feel confident that the future of our community is in excellent hands.

Michael Roberts, Operations Manager

Fifty Years on Rodney Parham Road—And Before That...

In 2025, our congregation celebrates a half century in our magnificent building on Rodney Parham Road. Congregation B'nai Israel, though, was founded in 1866, 109 years before moving to our current location. Thankfully, information and images of our previous Temple buildings should be meticulously preserved in our Temple archives, lovingly maintained by volunteers led by Phillip Spivey, Archives Chair, and Jim Pfeifer.

In celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of our current building, Jim Pfeifer has mounted an exhibit about our first Temple, dedicated in 1872 on Center Street. Please be sure to peruse the photos and artifacts, clearly labeled and displayed in the lobby, whenever you are at the Temple.

Jim plans future exhibits to highlight the Temple's longtime home at the corner of Capitol and Broadway and our current facility on Rodney Parham Road, all leading up to an anticipated celebration of our building in the fall.
